EXTRACT, part of a paper discovered among the loose Parliamentary papers in the Register-house.

“ EXCEPTIONS against JAMES CRICHTON, why he ought not “ to be the Commissioner to the Parliament for the Shire of “ Dumfries, anno 1660 and 1661.

“ 1st, THE election of the said James to be commissioner is void, be“ cause divers persons who had a right to have voted in the election of “ commissioners were not admitted, upon pretext that they were only “ appearand heirs; whereas the appearand heirs both of noblemen and “ barons respectively, may sit in Parliament, and vote to the election of “ commissioners.”

The answer to this paper is extant, and a copy has been given to the agent for the respondents: It contains no contradiction of the above assertion.

At Edinburgh, 13th May 1662.

Act for settling the Orders in the Parliament House.

IT is appointed, that all Members of Parliament doe preceisslie keep the dyets of Parliament, under the paines following, viz. each Nobleman and Bishop for each dyet's absence without leave, twelff pund Scots, each Barron sex punds, and each Burges three punds; and that they pay the just half of their penalties for each dyet they come in sero, after the calling of the Rolls of Parliament.

That none be admitted to stay in Parliament but the ordinar members of Parliament, viz. the Archbishops and Bishops, Noblemen, Officers of State, Commissioners from shires and burrowes, and the Clerk of Register's deputies and servants employed be him to serve in the House: And besids these, admittance is allowed to the eldest sons and appearand airs-male of Noblemen, to the Senators of the College of Justice, to the Knight-Marishall, to the Ushers, to the Lyon, to the Justice Deputs, to the King's Agent; one servant allowed to the Lord Chancellour, two to the Constable, two to the Marishall, and one to the Advocat.

And it is ordered, that none presume to sit upon the Banishes save the Nobilitie and Clergie; that the Officers of State sit upon the steps of the throne; that the Commissioners of Shires and Burrowes sit in the furmes appointed for them; that Noblemen's Eldest Sons and Airs aforesaid sit on the lower Bainshes of the Throne; that the Lords of the Session sit at ane table which is to stand betwixt the Throne and the Commissioners from Burrowes. And that none presume to sit at the Clerk's Table save the Clerk Register, and the Deputs and servants to be employed be him in the service of the House; that any other persons allowed accessse shall sit at the far end of the seats appointed for the Commissioners from Shires and Burrowes.

And it is appointed, that the Knight Marishall and the Maiffers be careful, as they will be anserable upon their perrill, that thir orders be obeyed; and that they exact twentie shilling Sterline from every person who shall be found within the House and are not members, nor admitted as aforesaid; besides their removal and imprisonment at the second fault; and their penalties, with the former, to be collected by the Maistrar, and deposited in the hands of

to be disposed upon by order of the House.

That after the House is set none offer to stand or walk, or keep private discourses one with another: that none goe forth except in cases of necessitie; and that they forthwith returne nor any persons suffered to stay at the articles, save Members of Parliament.

That in all debates of the House no persone offer to interrupt another, nor direct his discourse to any but to the Lord Chancellor or President.

That all reflections be forborne, and that no man offer at one dyet, and at one business, to speik oftener than twice at most, except in such cases where leave shall be first asked and given by his Matie, or his commissioner. That no Member of Parliament leave the House until the meeting be by his Majestie or his commissioner dissolved.

Act concerning Members of Parliament who do not attend.

FORASMUCHAS the King's Majesty, out of his affection to this his ancient kingdome, and for settling and securing the true interest, lawes, liberties, and peace of the same, hath been pleased to call a meeting of his Estates in Parliament, to be heir at Edinburgh at this tyme. And it being most necessar for these ends, and for the advancement of his Majesty's service, That all members of Parliament should, according to their alledgeance and duety, attend and keip the meetings of the Parliament; Thairfor the King's Majesty, with the advice and consent of his Estates of Parliament, hath statute and appointed, and accordingly doth heirby require and command all Archbishops, Bishops, Noblemen, Commissioners of Shyres and Burrowes, To come and attend his Majestie or his Commissioner in the Meitings of this present Parliament, and in all succeeding Parliaments; Certifieing all such as without a lawfull excuse, tymely represented and admitted be his Majestie or his Commissioners, shall, after the twenrie-seventh day of May instant, be absent from this Parliament, or who, in any succeeding Parliaments, shall be absent at the dyets, to be appointed be his Matie, they shall be lyable unto, and incur the paines and penalties following, viz. each Archbishop, Bishop, and Nobleman, the sume of twelve hundreth pund Scots, each commissioner of shires the sume of sex hundreth pund Scots, and each commissioner of burrowes the sume of two hundreth pund Scots, which penalties are pntlie to be raised, and Letters of Horning and poinding are heirby ordained to be direct for payment of the same to his Majestie's Thesaurer, or Deput Thesaurer. And it is heirby declared, that thir penalties are to be by and attour, and without prejudice of what further censure the parliament shall think fit to inflict for so hie contempt and neglect of his Majestie and his authority. And ordaines publication to be made hereof, at the mercat croce of Edinburgh, be Heraulds, with sound of trumpet, wherethrow none pretend ignorance of the same.

EXTRACT

EXTRACT of the MINUTES of the PARLIAMENT of SCOTLAND, on the days when, in the discussion of the Act to regulate the mode of Elections, it was proposed to exclude the Eldest Sons of Peers.

MINUTE LXIV.

Friday, January 24. 1707.

Prayer said,

Rolls called,

THEN the debate mentioned in the former day's minute was resumed anent what proportions the barons and borrows shall have of the forty-five members that are to sit in the House of Commons of Great Britain.

And thereupon a clause was offered to be insert in the act, regulating the manner of electing the representatives for Scotland, in these terms :
 " And her Majesty, with advice and consent foresaid, statutes and or" dains, that thirty shall be the number of barons, and fifteen the num" ber of burghs, to represent this part of the united kingdom in the " House of Commons of Great Britain ; and that no Peer, nor the " eldest Son of any Peer, can be chosen to represent either shire or
 " burgh of this part of the united kingdom in the House of Commons."

And after debate upon the first part of the said clause, the vote was stated, " If the number shall be thirty for the barons and fifteen for the " boroughs, yea or not ?"

But, before voting, the Earl of Cromerty gave in a protestation in the terms following: viz. " I George Earl of Cromerty do protest, that " nothing that shall be enacted as to the shire of Cromerty, their being " adjoined to any other shire, as to the method or manner of electing " of commissioners to the Parliament of Great Britain, shall infer any

" derogation

"derogation to the privilege of that shire, or to my right as heritable
"sheriff thereof;" and took instruments thereupon.

Thereafter the vote was put, "If the number shall be thirty for the "barons and fifteen for the boroughs, yea or not?" and it carried,
"Yea."

Adjourned till Monday next at ten o'clock.

MINUTE LXV.

Monday, January 27. 1707.

Prayers said,

Rolls called,

THEN the second part of the overture mentioned in the former day's minutes was again read, in these terms: "And that no Peer, nor the
"eldest Son of any Peer, can be chosen to represent either shire or
"burgh of this part of the united kingdom in the said House of Com"mons."

And after a debate thereon, another clause was offered, in these terms:
"Declaring always, that none shall elect nor be elected to represent a "shire or burgh in the parliament of Great Britain, from this part of "the united kingdom, except such as are capable by the laws of this "kingdom to elect or be elected as commissioners for shire or burgh to "the said parliament."

And after farther reasoning thereon, the vote was stated, "Approve "of the first clause, or of the second."

But, before voting, it was agreed that the votes be marked, and that a list of the members names, as they vote, be printed and recorded; and the Lord Chancellor was allowed to have his name printed and recorded amongst those who voted for the second clause.

Then the vote was put, "approve of the first clause or second;" and it carried, "Second."

Thereafter

Thereafter moved, " That the parliament proceed to consider in what manner the severall shires of this kingdom shall choose the thirty members appointed to represent them in the House of Commons of Great Britain ; as also, in what manner the severall boroughs shall choose the fifteen members appointed to represent them in the said House of Commons."

And after some discourse thereon, the consideration thereof was delayed till next sederunt of parliament.

Adjourned till to-morrow at ten o'clock.

'ACCOUNT of the DEBATE in the SCOTS PARLIAMENT', on the Proposal to exclude the eldest SONS of SCOTS PEERS, as given in DE FOE's History of the Union, 2d Edit. p. 496.

OBSERVATION MINUTE LXV.

THE motion against the eldest sons of Peers had not a little to be said for it : particularly, that when the influence of the nobility in Scotland, comes to be considered with the small number of Members to be chosen, it might in time to come, rise to what was hinted before in the project of reducing the Lords that did not sit in the House of Peers, to a level with the Commons, and make them capable of sitting in the House of Commons ; that then it might come to pass, that Scotland should be represented only by her nobility ; and that there should be Scots Lords in the Parliament of Great Britain : so here in time it might happen, that the nobility in the House of Peers, and their eldest sons in the House of Commons, might make up the whole representative of Scotland.

There were a great many arguments brought against this proposal ;
 but these seemed the most prevailing, viz.

1st, That it had always been allowed in Scotland, before, viz. that the eldest sons of Peers might be elected.

2d, That in England, the eldest sons of Peers do sit in the House of Commons ; and it would break in upon the rule of equalities, to alter it, and put the Scots Gentlemen in a worse condition than the English.

After some time, a vote was offered that put it to an end, viz. to let the right of being elected remain just as it was, without any alteration at all : That he that had a right or capacity to vote, or to be chosen before, should have so still ; and this ended the debate.

Chandler,

Chandler, Page 103. Vol. IV. London Edition, 1742.

Dec. 3. The House of Commons took into consideration that part of the act for uniting the two kingdoms which relates to the election of Members to serve in that House, for that part of Great Britain called Scotland; and having heard counsel, and the petitions and representations relating to the incapacity of the eldest sons of Scots Peers to represent the Commons of Scotland in the Parliament of Great Britain being read, the substance both of the counsel's arguments, and of those representations was, That, by an act of the Scots Parliament, intituled, An act for settling the manner of electing sixteen Peers, and forty-five commoners, to represent Scotland in the Parliament of Great Britain; which act was ratified by the act for uniting the two kingdoms; it was declared, that none shall be capable to elect or be elected to represent a shire or burgh in the Parliament of Great Britain, for that part of the united kingdom, except such as were then capable to elect or be elected as commissioners for shires or burghs to the Parliament of Scotland: That from hence it evidently followed that the Scots Peers eldest sons could not sit in the House of Commons of Great Britain, unless it did appear that they were capable to be elected, and to sit as members of Parliament of Scotland; but as a proof of the contrary, several instances were alleged of their being always rejected by the Parliament of Scotland; and in particular, the Viscount Tarbat's eldest son, in the year 1689: That the fundamental law of the Union, had most expressly reserved to the Commons of Scotland that valuable privilege of electing their representatives in Parliament from among the best qualified gentlemen of their own number and state, in the same manner as they had formerly used to do: That in electing members of Parliament, the choice of the electors ought to be made as free as is possible from the influence either of bribes or threats, and in justice should only be determined by

by the honesty and candour of the person to be chosen; that his character be such as promises a faithful discharge of so great a trust; and that his inclination be accompanied with a sufficient capacity to serve the particular interest of his constituents, as well as the general interest of his country: But that few in Scotland could be supposed to be in a condition to maintain this character, the commons there being surrounded with a numerous and powerful peerage, who, like so many sovereigns, judge and determine within their respective bounds, in criminal as well as civil matters, being vested with vast superiorities and heritable jurisdictions; so that no commoner, holding any part of his lands of a Peer, or indeed being in his neighbourhood, could be reckoned at liberty to make a free election of his representative; so that the commons of Scotland, whereof the majority of their Parliament consisted, had invincible arguments for preserving entire to themselves that necessary privilege of excluding their Peers eldest sons from being members of that House: That if the Parliament of Scotland, which consisted of Peers and commoners sitting together in the same house, enjoying the same liberty of speech, and the same common privilege and judicative capacity, being also restricted to the same rules and forms, had so many weighty reasons for excluding their Peers eldest sons, how many more arguments of greater moment might be urged in the House of Commons of Great Britain, who subsisted a separate and distinct House from the Peers; enjoying by themselves so many valuable privileges and immunities, which could not be encroached upon or subjected to a House of Peers, without endangering the whole constitution of the House of Commons? And in the last place, That England and Scotland being now united, and their interests inseparably joined, it ought to be a maxim with all true Britons, that the liberty of the Commons of Scotland will always be an advantage to those of England, and that the slavery of the first cannot fail ending in the destruction of the latter.—Little was offered on the other side against these arguments; so that the question being put, “ That the eldest sons of the Peers of Scotland “ were capable, by the laws of Scotland at the time of the Union, to “ elect or be elected to represent any shire or burgh in Scotland to sit

" in the House of Commons of Great Britain?" it passed in the negative.

In pursuance of which, three days after, the Commons ordered their Speaker to issue out his warrants to the clerk of the crown to make out new writs for the electing commissioners to serve in this present Parliament, for the shire of Aberdeen, in the room of William Lord Haddo, son of the Earl of Aberdeen, and for the shire of Linlithgow, in the room of James Lord Johnstoun, son of the Marquis of Annandale; who, being eldest sons of Peers of Scotland, were declared to be incapable to sit in that House.

(For the Minutes of the British Parliament, see the Duplies for Colonel Alexander Stewart).
